

"From its inception within the vibrant halls of Morehouse College to the heart of the Atlanta University Center (AUC), Auntie's Spot has been more than a food truck; it's been a beacon of innovation, hope, and community service. Founded by the visionary duo, Noel Boadi '25 and Miles Mayfield '25, students who recognized a gaping need and dared to fill it, Auntie's Spot has evolved from a late-night hunger solution into a crusade against food inequity.

"The story began with a simple observation: AUC students had no access to affordable, nutritious meals after 9 pm. This was more than an inconvenience; it was a barrier to health, well-being, and academic success. Fueled by a mix of entrepreneurial spirit and social consciousness, Noel and Miles transformed a dorm room idea into a community-focused enterprise. They weren't just serving food; they were serving dignity, one plate at a time.

"Auntie's Spot quickly distinguished itself by its commitment to quality, affordability, and, importantly, its philanthropy. From donating meals to local shelters to engaging in community service, Noel and Miles have consistently demonstrated that Auntie's Spot's mission extends far beyond the confines of a food truck. They are heroes not for the accolades but for the lives they touch and the community they build.

"This spirit of innovation and service is now poised for a quantum leap with the introduction of SwiftServe, an AI-driven platform designed to revolutionize how food trucks and mobile vendors operate. By optimizing location decisions, streamlining supply chains, and providing data-driven operational insights, SwiftServe promises to multiply Auntie's Spot's impact, reaching more people, more efficiently, and with an even greater array of services. But the vision doesn't end with food trucks. SwiftServe aims to tackle global challenges head-on, from food deserts to emergency services, healthcare, and beyond. With an initial focus on the mobile vending industry in Atlanta, the potential for SwiftServe is as boundless as the team's ambition to make a difference.

"As Auntie's Spot seeks to raise funds and broaden its community impact with SwiftServe, they invite Morehouse alumni and supporters from all walks of life to join them. This venture represents a unique confluence of innovation, social entrepreneurship, and community service – a true testament to what can be achieved when passion meets purpose.

"Join Noel, Miles, and the Auntie's Spot team as they embark on this next chapter. Your support can help transform this vision into a reality, ensuring that Auntie's Spot continues to be a symbol of hope, a source of nourishment, and a force for good in Atlanta and beyond. Together, we can fight food inequity, one meal at a time, and redefine the future of mobile dining with technology and heart."
